Maine storage for major Law Firm

Storage from Maine's Series 31 range was specified for LG at the city's prominent More London Riverside development. The building was designed by Foster and Partners, and the interior has been specially tailored by architects MCM to meet the needs of the firm's growing business. Maine storage was chosen for the 'quality and flexibility' blend inherent in its finished product.

MCM resolved the substantial file storage requirements associated with a large practice with a specification totalling 1200 units. Cupboards, stationery and pigeonhole units were specified in an effective colour palette, internals finished in aqua, green or red with all cupboard internals finished in white.

Cupboard units in 2 different heights were specified across five of the nine floors, the 1085mm high units accommodate three levels of lever arch storage whilst the 2139mm units accommodates six levels, allowing file media to be condensed into the most efficient space.

Says MCM project architect Sally Stead: "Maine supplied a quality product at a competitive price for LG. Maine's flexibility in manufacturing enabled MCM to 'tweak' the standard product providing a tailored solution to satisfy LG's particular requirements".

"Maine offer a wide range of colours for their storage and their team worked closely with us to attain the gloss levels we sought as well produce white internals at no additional cost," says Sally.

MCM evaluate all materials and products against stringent environmental criteria. The fact that Maine is manufactured in the UK was an important consideration in making the final product selection.

Installation to More London of Maine's Series 31 occurred over a two-month period. Knoll furniture was also specified through Spacecraft, the appointed Knoll dealer.
